ROOCHII CLEANING

Which Cleaning Frequency Fits Your Home?

Decision Worksheet for Weekly, Biweekly, or Monthly House Cleaning

How to use this worksheet: For each question, check the option that best describes your home. Then count your checks in the Weekly, Biweekly, and Monthly columns. The column with the most checks is a practical starting point, not a guarantee or fixed recommendation.

1. Find Your Best Starting Schedule

Question	Weekly	Biweekly	Monthly
How quickly does routine cleaning work become noticeable?	[ ] Within about a week	[ ] Around 1-2 weeks	[ ] Closer to 3-4 weeks
How much routine cleaning do you want to handle yourself?	[ ] Very little	[ ] Some between visits	[ ] Most routine upkeep
How active is the home on a typical week?	[ ] High activity	[ ] Moderate activity	[ ] Light activity
How soon do bathrooms and kitchen areas usually need attention?	[ ] About weekly	[ ] About every 2 weeks	[ ] I maintain them between visits
How much time do you personally have for cleaning?	[ ] Very limited	[ ] Some time	[ ] Comfortable doing routine upkeep
How long do you prefer to go between professional visits?	[ ] About 1 week	[ ] About 2 weeks	[ ] About 4 weeks
When does buildup usually start bothering you?	[ ] Before a week passes	[ ] Within 1-2 weeks	[ ] After several weeks

Weekly checks: _____	Biweekly checks: _____	Monthly checks: _____

Your starting point: _____

If the results are close, focus on what matters most to you: how quickly cleaning work accumulates, how much upkeep you want to handle, and how often you want professional help.

2. Add the Details That Can Change Your Quote

Cleaning frequency is only one part of the estimate. Fill in these details before requesting or comparing recurring cleaning quotes.

Questions to ask before booking:	_____

Important: This worksheet is a planning aid. Weekly, biweekly, and monthly cleaning can all work for different homes. The best schedule depends on the home's actual condition, size, bathrooms, fixtures, household activity, requested services, and how much routine cleaning the household handles between visits. Final pricing should come from the approved cleaning quote.
